A PITCH IN TIME

"AND then this Jackson came up to bat," Red continued excitedly, "and hit a home run that sent three other guys home and won the game for us, 13 to 12!" He was telling Betty the story of his team's last baseball game.

"My, that's terrific," Betty enthused. "But still," she added coyly, "if you hadn't hit that double just before Jackson came up to bat, his home run wouldn't have done much good."

"Oh, that wasn't anything," Red blushed modestly. "Anyone can hit a double. But a home run—that's an event! Say," he said, changing the subject, "from what I've been reading, I see your team is tops this year."

Betty nodded. "The Glendale boys are pretty good," she admitted, "but the season isn't over yet, and I always think it's bad luck to talk about how wonderful they are until then."

"But how can they lose?" Red scoffed. "With Pitch Parker on the mound, it looks like they'll cop high honors this year."

Betty winced, but Red didn't notice. "You know, Betty," he said abruptly, and his voice became soft and husky, "it's wonderful knowing a girl like you. You're so sweet and feminine, and still you can talk baseball with the best of them."

Betty smiled gratefully. Red didn't know it, but he'd rescued her in the nick of time. Betty didn't want to discuss Pitch Parker's virtues. She was sure Red meant what he said, and she didn't want to spoil his impression of her. For Pitch Parker was a girl—and that girl was Elizabeth Parker Randall.

Red didn't know who Pitch Parker was because he'd just recently moved into the neighboring town of Holbrook. Betty had met him at a party at a friend's home after one of his games, and they'd seemed to hit it off right from the start. So far, Betty knew, she'd been very lucky, and she didn't want to ruin that luck herself or even think about what would happen if Red found out on his own.

He'd be certain to resent her being such a good ball player. He wasn't like the boys on her own team. Oh, maybe they'd resented her a bit at the beginning, too, when the coach had first seen her pitching ball for some of the young boys in her neighborhood and had urged her to join the team. But they soon learned that she was a better pitcher than any of them, and now they treated her just like any other player.

But Red! Red simply wouldn't understand. What Betty was going to do when the Glendale-Holbrook game came up, she didn't know. But she had to think of something to stay out of it.

Excitement ran high at Glendale the entire period before the Holbrook game, the last one of the season, and whenever anyone mentioned the game, Betty felt the remark personally. Everybody seemed to think Holbrook was really in top form this year. Since Holbrook was the neighboring town, the rivalry between its teams and Glendale's was always tremendous.

By the week of the game the whole school was in a state of nervousness. Glendale hadn't lost a contest all season, and the coach and every member of the team wanted to keep that record intact. Even if they lost the Holbrook game, chances were that they'd still win the championship. But the game seemed to be more a matter of principle than just another contest, and each player was determined to do or die for dear old Glendale.

Holbrook High was as excited as Glendale, and most of Betty's dates with Red before the game had consisted of discussions about who had the better chance of winning the coming battle. But Betty felt fairly certain that Red hadn't become suspicious yet—though it had taken a lot of clever talking on her part.

A few days before the game Betty finally hit on a plan to avoid playing. She began pretending that she had a sore arm and couldn't pitch. The coach got a bit disturbed, and the team became a little more worried than they already were, but Bob Langdon, the next-ranking pitcher, began intensive training right away so he could be in top condition in time for the game. Now Betty could sit in the bleachers; Red, if her luck held out, need never discover

OH, JUST LUCKY, I GUESS.
YOU LUCKY YOU DON'T DESERVE THAT DREAMBOAT!

WAIT A MINUTE! I JUST REMEMBERED! TERRY HAS A TWIN BROTHER WHO'S STILL AT LINCOLN HIGH-- MAYBE I COULD GET HIM FOR YOU!
YOU MEAN THERE ARE ACTUALLY TWO DREAMBOATS LIKE HIM IN THIS TOWN?!

I DON'T KNOW ABOUT THAT! HE DID TELL ME THEY WON A LOT OF TWIN CONTESTS!
SWELL... LET'S PLAN TO ARRANGE THIS!
FINE! WHILE YOU'RE PLANNING, HEDY WILL OPERATE!

HELLO, TERRY! FINISH YOUR CALL?
YEP! I WAS CALLING MY BROTHER TO FIND OUT IF HE HAD A DATE FOR TONIGHT, SO HE COULD GO TO OUR SCHOOL DANCE HERE AND SEE HOW HE LIKES CENTERVILLE HIGH! IF HE LIKES IT HE MIGHT TRANSFER HERE TOO! ANYWAY, HE STILL HASN'T MADE A DATE YET!
WELL, BY A STRANGE COINCIDENCE I HAPPEN TO BE DATELESS TOO--A LAST MINUTE CANCELLATION, OF COURSE! BUT NO ONE KNOWS CENTERVILLE HIGH BETTER'N I, AND I'D BE GLAD TO TRY AND SELL IT TO YOUR BROTHER!
SWELL! I'LL CALL HIM UP AND TELL HIM THAT!
OH, TERRY, I'VE GOT SOMETHING TO ASK YOU! PATSY AND I WERE WONDERING IF...

OH, DIRTY TRICKS AND HEDY ARE SYNONYMOUS!

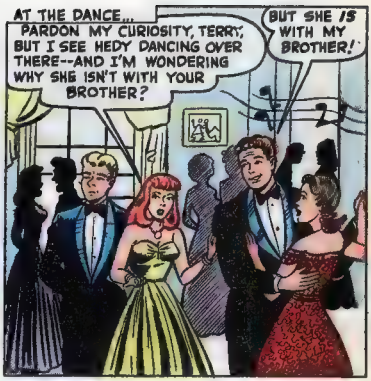
IN A WAY I'M VERY GLAD SHE BROKE OUR DATE--I FOUND OUT WHAT SHE'S LIKE! SHE MADE SOME NASTY CRACK ABOUT YOU BEING AVAILABLE BUT I WOULDN'T INSULT YOU BY ASKING AT THE LAST MINUTE!
IT WOULD BE AN HONOR, NOT AN INSULT, JACK! I DON'T HAVE A DATE AND I'D LOVE TO GO WITH YOU! AND LET'S FORGET ABOUT HEDY TOO!
SODAS 20¢



AT THE DANCE...
PARDON MY CURIOSITY, TERRY, BUT I SEE HEDY DANCING OVER THERE--AND I'M WONDERING WHY SHE ISN'T WITH YOUR BROTHER?
BUT SHE IS WITH MY BROTHER!

FROM THE MISERABLE EXPRESSION ON HEDY'S FACE, I'D SAY SHE'S A LITTLE DISAPPOINTED IN TERRY'S TWIN BROTHER! WELL, I THINK SHE GOT JUST WHAT SHE DESERVED!
YES, BUT I CAN'T FIGURE OUT HOW THOSE BOYS COULD POSSIBLY WIN A CONTEST FOR TWINS!

ER, TERRY... JUST WHAT KIND OF CONTEST DID YOU SAY YOU AND YOUR BROTHER WON?
OH, WE ALWAYS GOT FIRST PRIZE AS THE MOST UNIDENTICAL TWINS IN THE STATE!
YUK! YUK! THAT WE DID... YUK! YUK!

her secret; and her plan might work out all right for everyone.

The day of the game dawned bright and clear. Betty walked to the field with several of her girl friends and maneuvered them into seats in back of first base so they wouldn't miss a single play.

Right from the first inning Betty realized something was wrong with Glendale. Perhaps they'd overtrained, or maybe they were too nervous about the game's outcome to concentrate on good playing—whatever it was. Betty couldn't put her finger on it, but something was definitely wrong, she was sure of that. And Bob's pitching didn't help any; he seemed to be trying too hard.

Holbrook scored the first run in the second inning, and the crowd went into an uproar. Glendale managed to come back and tie the game in the third, but Betty felt that it wasn't any better. The whole game went along like that—Holbrook would score a run, and Glendale would tie them, but obviously neither side felt any too confident.

By the eighth inning the Glendale fans began shouting for Pitch Parker. Betty scrounged as far down in her seat as she could get. She and Red had agreed that they should ignore each other throughout the game so they could root completely for their own teams, and to have him find out about her now would be the worst irony possible.

Then in the ninth inning it happened. Glendale was one run ahead, Bob was pitching to Holbrook, and there were two men on base. The next batter hit a low line drive. Bob knocked it down with his bare hand, then threw to first—too late. The bases were loaded now, and Bob was holding his wrist with a pained expression on his face. Quickly, he signalled to the manager, who ran out to the mound. They talked a few seconds, then walked off the field together. A questioning murmur rose from the Glendale crowd. Everybody knew about Betty's arm, too—and if there weren't another better pitcher to throw into the game, it would have to be forfeited.

The next thing Betty knew was that the coach was standing in front of her. "How about it, Pitch?" he asked softly. "Think your arm could stand one more game?"

Betty looked up at him. Vaguely she heard the pleas of the crowd around her, "We want Parker! We want Parker!"

Somehow she managed to nod at the coach and run down to the locker room. Without thinking of what this would mean to her private life, she scrambled into her uniform and dashed out to the pitcher's mound.

A loud cheer rose from the Glendale rooters, and Betty threw a couple of warm-up pitches. "Play ball!" the umpire yelled, and only then did Betty let herself look at the next Holbrook batter. It was Red! He was staring at her dumfoundedly. This is it, Betty told herself grimly. She tried to grin at him, but the grin ended in a feeble twist of her lips. Before she could brood about her own problem, she wound up and threw him a curved ball. Three strikes—and he was out. Betty repeated her performance twice more—and the game was Glendale's!

Betty's teammates lifted her onto their shoulders and carried her triumphantly off the field. Betty didn't look in the direction of the Holbrook players at all; she was too busy trying to keep a smile on her face and tears out of her eyes.

No more Red, she told herself sadly on the way home. But what else could she have done? She couldn't have deserted her team at that crucial moment.

She was rounding the corner of her street when she spotted somebody sitting on her front steps—somebody who looked suspiciously like . . . like Red! But no, it couldn't be. In a few seconds she was at her front walk—and it was Red! Without thinking how her words sounded, Betty poured out her story of why she'd kept her baseball identity a secret and of how she hadn't meant to deceive him just until the big game. When she'd finished, she kept her eyes glued on her feet.

"You know," Red said softly, reaching for her hand, "some guys are just lucky, I guess." Startled, Betty looked up. This was the last reply she'd expected. "Not only are you a sweet girl," Red continued, "but you're a wonderful ball player, too! The way you got in there and pitched for your team—I'll never forget it!"

"You won't?" Betty asked in a small voice.

"No," Red repeated firmly, "nor you either. How lucky can a guy get?" He grinned at Betty, and she sat down beside him, suddenly happy. She knew now that she'd won a great deal more than just another baseball game! THE END 6867

BLACKHEADS "PET HATE"

Say Men, Girls in Choosing Date

What a "black mark" is the blackhead . . . according to men and girls popular enough to be choosy about dates!

"Nobody's dreamboat!" "Nobody's date bait!" And that's not all that's said of those who are careless about blackheads. But blackheads ARE ugly! Blackheads ARE grimy! And they DON'T look good in close-ups!

So can you blame the fellow who says, "Sure, I meet lots of girls who look cute at first glance. But if, on that second glance, I see dingy blackheads, it's good night!"

Or can you blame the girl who confesses, "I hate to go out with a fellow who has blackheads. If he's careless about that you're sure he'll embarrass you in other ways, too!"

But you — are YOUR ears burning? Well, you've company and, sad to say, good company. There are lots of otherwise attractive fellows and girls who could date anyone they like if they'd only realize how offensive blackheads are . . . and how easily and quickly they could get rid of them . . . if they want to!

"He-Man" Often Guilty of Blackhead Crime

Take your "he-man" . . . super at track, games, sports of all kinds . . . who thinks that after just a shower he's ready to go anywhere! And won't the girls all admire his muscles!

Sure they would! But not many dance floors are set up for hurdle races! You can't show off your snappy left hook when only cokes are in the ring. The "he-man" who's also clean-cut, will get the breaks wherever he is.

Even Cute Girls Become Careless

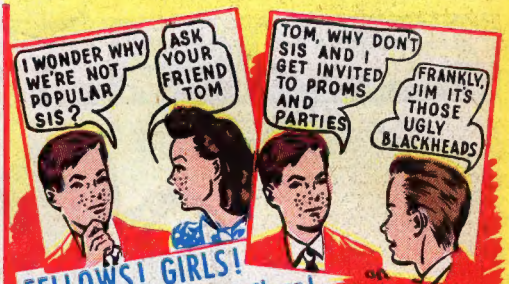
Easy, too easy, for a girl to think that if she has the latest in clothes and hair-do she needn't bother about blackheads. A little more make-up, she guesses, will take care of that. BUT MAKE-UP WON'T HIDE BLACKHEADS! Not unless it's plaster of paris, maybe! And even good make-up "slips" at a dance! So don't take chances, cute though you may be!

TAKE THESE TIPS TO BANISH BLACKHEADS

Keep skin clean by washing morning and night with warm, almost hot, water. Use good soap and plenty of it. And finish with cool water.

Extract every blackhead as soon as you see it — with a SAFE extractor. Don't use finger nails. Don't squeeze. That may mean infection, injured tissues, a marred skin.

Just be clean! Be quick! And be safe! That's easy! And that's ALL!



I WONDER WHY WE'RE NOT POPULAR SIS?
ASK YOUR FRIEND TOM
TOM, WHY DON'T SIS AND I GET INVITED TO PROMS AND PARTIES
FRANKLY, JIM IT'S THOSE UGLY BLACKHEADS

FELLOWS! GIRLS! Keep Skin Clear and Clean!
